

Colors

Colors have their own unspoken language,
Of which convey a preconceived notion.
Blue for boys as wreck-less as the ocean,
Pink for girls as perceived to be tranquil.
Colors can represent ones anguish,
They can set a revolution in motion.
White can single the surrender slogan,
Red blood is splattered in banish.

Each shade of color with higher meaning.
The difference between love and malice.
White typically represents chlorinate,
Dark red is to invoke fear or callous.
Colors can convey what words could never,
For the underlying message too great.
