Punctuating Titles: When to Use Italics, Underlining, and "Quotation Marks."

It's easy for students to forget that different types of titles require different typographical features. It is even harder to remember which type of title requires which type of punctuation. Despair not! If you remember these two handy rules, you can keep the difference straight:

1) Short works and parts of long works are usually in quotation marks.

12) "One or Two Page Handout"

Ex: "Old English Verbs: A One Page Guide"

2) Long works and collections of short works are usually put in italics (or underlined when submitting publication work to editors).

A Few Final Notes:

- In past editions of MLA, underlining a title and italicizing it were considered synonymous. That is no longer the case, and the current edition of MLA favors italics. If you submit articles for publication, some proofreaders and copy editors prefer underlining to italics. The arrival of word-processing has made italics fairly easy to make, and many people think they look classier than underlining.
- Traditional religious works that are foundational to a religious group or culture are capitalized, but not italicized or underlined. For instance, note the Torah, the Bible, the Koran, the Book of Mormon, and the Vedas [no italics or quotation marks].
- Visual artwork, including paintings, sculptures, drawings, mixed media, and whatnot, is italicized, never put in quotation marks. Thus, Van Gogh's Starry Night and Rodin's The Thinker both have italics.
- The one exception to this policy is the title of your own unpublished student essay at the top of the first page. You do not need to underline your own title or put it in quotation marks.

Capitalization of Titles

Normally, most words in a title are capitalized. The most common rule is that all "important" words should be capitalized, which I think isn't helpful as a criterion. In actual practice, MLA requires the first and last word in the title is capitalized, along with every noun and every verb, every adjective, and every adverb. MLA typically does not capitalize prepositions and articles; however, outside of MLA requirements, many other guidelines call for capitalizing every word that is more than three letters long. Another common rule of thumb is to capitalize the first and last words of the title, and then capitalize everything else except for prepositions and articles. Sometimes, especially in short titles, every single word might optionally be capitalized.

Examples:

The Planet of the Apes [The words "of" and "the" are not capitalized.] The Land that Time Forgot

"Why Not Me?" [Since title is so short, all the words are capitalized.]

"Losing My Religion" [Since title is so short, all the words are capitalized.]

You can refer to how the author or book capitalizes the title to double-check how the author did it. When in complete doubt, just capitalize every word; it is better to capitalize too many words than too few in a title.

Capitalizing words does not mean putting each letter in capital print, only the first letter. Do not indicate titles by putting them in all capitals, like DRACULA. Instead, write Dracula. Note that these guidelines reflect Modern Language Association (MLA) format for English students. Scientific articles follow different conventions in American Psychological Association (APA) format.
